

This is a great message. I am truly heartened to see more people in the field of mental health waking up to what is going on and taking a different approach. I recognize this isn't just about doing what I can to save my own child and do whatever is possible to give her both parents again, but that this will be the kind of shift that help many thousands more over time.

An Update: Current Work on Parental Alienation